THE SIMPLE CHURCH.

I've been to a Quaker meeting, wife, and I shall go again,
It was so quiet and so neat, o simple and so plain;
The angels seemed to gather there from off the other shore,
And fold their wings in quietness, as though they'd been before.
There was no high-priced organ there, no costly singing choir,
To help you raise your thoughts to God, and holiness inspire.
But, sitting still in silence, we seemed to feel and know
The still, small voice that entered in and told the way to go;
The walls were free from painting and costly works of art,
That in our modern churches seem to play so large a part,
For it seems they each endeavor to please the eye of man,
And lose all thoughts of plainness in every church they plan.
The windows had no colored glass to shed a gloom around,
But God's pure sunlight entered, unrestrained and all unbound,
And centred in a little spot, so bright it seemed to me
A glimpse of brightness somewhat like our future home will be.
There was no learned minister, who read us from a book,
And showed that he had practised his word and look,
But a sermon full of wisdom was preached by an old Friend,
That took right hold of all our thoughts, and held them to the end.
He used no long, high-sounding words, and had a sing-song way
In drawing out his sentences in what he had to say,
But he told the truth, and told it so that every one that heard
Seemed to feel the prompting spirit more than just the spoken word.
There was no pulpit decked with flowers of beauty, rich and rare,
And made from costly foreign woods, almost beyond compare,
But plain and simple as the truths that we had that day heard;
And the common, painted gallery did much to help the word.
There was no bustle, noise, or stir, as each one took his seat,
But silence settled over all, not solemn, but so sweet.
And each, in his quiet way, implored for strength to know
The right from wrong in everything, but asked the way to go.
It seemed when I was there, wife, so peaceful, and so still,
That I was in God's presence, and there to do His will;
The simple, peaceful quiet did more to move my heart
Than any worship yet had done, with all its show and art.
I'm going there again, wife, and you will like it too.
I know what it has done for me, 'twill do the same for you;
And you, when you've entered through the plain but open door,
Will wonder why you've never tried the simple church before.
